TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

A most enjoyable and instructive afternoon was spent at the club meeting March 26. The meeting was held at the Country Club, and an immense boquet of beautiful lilac greeted the ladies as they entered the club room. At the business session, interesting reports were given of three Reciprocity Days recently attended by members of the club. Mrs. A. W. Tower reoprted pleasant days with the Entreous Club of Boyle Heights and the Rosecrans Club of Echo Park. Mrs. N. H. Nard reported the day spent with the Shakespeare Club of Pasadena. One item especially interesting to the club at this time was in regard to the Shakespeare club house. The lot was bought, club house built and furnished and all paid for in seven years. Certain members of the club incorporated as a stock company and sold stock. The question of a uniform graduating dress for the graduating class of the High School was brought up, and although no definite action was taken in regard to the matter, the idea met with favor. A committee of three, Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson, Mrs. E. D. Goode and Mrs. F. Grosvenor, was appointed to draft resolutions opposing an open pool room in Glendale. The program of the afternoon, which was arranged by Mrs. J. C. Sherer, opened with a vocal solo, "Kathleen," sung sweetly by Mrs. Stella May Orth, who generously responded to an encore with a little love song. Miss Ina Whittaker accompanied Mrs. Orth at the piano. Mrs. J. H. Wells read an interesting and practical paper on "A General Survey of Household Economics." Among other interests she touched on the purchase and preparation of food along the line of economy and nourishment, a subject of which she has made a study for years. Owing to the shortness of time, Mrs. Wells had to omit much that had been of benefit and interest to those who heard her. Mrs. J. B. Nichols of Compton, state chairman of household economics, gave a very comprehensive address on "Household Economics." She dealt with every problem, from the kitchen to the reception room, from the every-day duties to the pleasures of life. Her suggestions were not only ideal, but practical. As a demonstration of the practicability of household economics, Mrs. Sherer treated the ladies to a delicious cake which contained neither butter nor eggs. Mrs. Sherer also gave the cake recipe to those who wished it.

Mr. C. O. Rich and Mr. Bley spent two or three days of last week in visiting the country around about Fresno.

CITY TRUSTEES

A Real Lively Meeting—Sidney Dell Presents a Resolution and is Turned Down—Bonds Awarded to J. H. Adams Co.—Close Bidding on Verdugo Road Improvement Results in Delay—Attempt to Enjoin Trustees and Defeat Annexation

All members present except Mr. Lane who is still on the sick list. There was a good audience present, the chairs all being occupied as well as the ladder lying lengthwise of the room on which roosted as comfortably as nature and circumstances would permit, a number of interested citizens. Apparently the supply committee is not catering to the lobby. There were present four or five representatives of different bond buyers, also Sidney Dell, Esq.

Mr. Dell presented a petition asking for the dedication of the Verdugo Wash. He assured the board that he "held in his hand the signatures of a sufficient number of voters to assure the defeat of annexation unless said dedication be made." He was asked by the chariman whether he came to threaten the board of trustees; assuring the chairman that he had no such intention, he read resolutions signed by a certain number of voters declaring their intention to vote against annexation unless papers dedicating the wash to public use be put in escrow before election day. The resolution, however, was not delivered to the board nor the number of signers nor their names given, assurance being given by the distinguished speaker to the effect that they were "sufficient." In connection with this document Mr. Dell read a copy of a letter written by him to Judge E. M. Ross. When the reading was completed the chairman shut Mr. Dell off, refusing to give more time to a matter not vouched for by citizens whose names could not be made public. Mr. Dell offered to submit the paeprs to a committee, but the offer was declined and the regular business proceeded with. Bids on electric light bonds were taken up and read as follows:

G. G. Blymer & Co., San Francisco, par, accrued interest, premium $27.50.

N. W. Halsey & Co., Los Angeles, par, accrued interest, premium $57.

Purcell Gray & Gale, Los Angeles, par, accrued interest, premium $90.

J. H. Adams & Co., Los Angeles, par, accrued interest, premium $348.

L. C. Brand, Los Angeles, par, accrued interest, premium $255.

Farson Son & Co., Chicago, par, but want allowance of $590 for expenses in verifying legality.

Immediately after the reading of the bids, the finance committee retired and in a few minutes came in and made a report recommending the acceptance of the bid of Adams & Co.; which was adopted.

At this time a delegation of three residents of Milford street entered to be in at the reading of the city attorney's opinion as to the alleged nuisance of dogs in that section. The opinion was to the effect that the thing complained of is not a nuisance "per se," and cannot be regulated by ordinance. There may be certain circumstances connected with the place that constitute a particular nuisance which can be made the subject of a civil suit. The members of the committee expressed their disappointment in the opinion, but at the same time disclaimed any intention of reflecting upon the character of the dogs, which are very fine dogs indeed, but lacking in the finer instincts and forms of good citizenship.

A petition was read from citizens on Oak Drive asking that steps be taken to divert storm water from that thoroughfare. An application was received asking permit for peanut and pop corn stand on Brand boulevard near Fourth street; request refused. Application to improve portion of Lomita avenue near Columbus by private contract by F. R. Sinclair; granted. A communication was receivel and read from the city engineer in reference to bids for improvement of Verdugo Road to the effect that apparently the bid of E. E. Howard is $41.37 lower than the bid of Mr. P. L. Ferry, but that owing to irregularity in bids, he desired an opinion from the city attorney before making a recommendation. It seems that Mr. Howard's bid did not state that he would do grading as called for in specifications, at any price, differing in that respect from all other bids. Mr. Howard was represented by an attorney who explained the bid, reading from the advertisement calling for bids and claiming that the bid was up to all requirements although the cost of grading was not specified. The gist of the city attorney's opinion was to the effect that the bid is not regular, and after a long and irregular discussion, the matter was referred to city attorney and engineer to report next Monday evening. A resolution passed accepting the bid of J. H. Adams & Co. for electric light bonds at a premium of $348. A communication brought up the question as to whether an Eagle Rock dog found at large in Glendale (without naturalization papers) is subject to the license ordinance; this led to considerable discussion. The city attorney recommended that the application of the owner of the visiting dog for immunity from license tax, be refused and this prevailed.

A refund of tax to Thorp & Anderson was ordered.

Demands approved by finance committee were read and warrants ordered to be issued. During the day every member of the board had been served with a summons to appear before Judge Hutton in the superior court in Los Angeles at 10 a. m., Wednesday, to answer the charge of acting illegally in calling the annexation election. The complainants are J. B. Verdugo and Vicente Verdugo, represented by Attorneys Haas and Dunigan. The principal reliance of the complainants seems to rest upon the allegation that the election should have been called by ordinance instead of by resolution.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CARD PARTY.

Prominent among the recent social events was the card party given by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Beach in their artistic home on Brand boulevard. A most pleasant evening was enjoyed playing five hundred. Mrs. V. Price Brown and Mr. W. W. McElroy were awarded head prizes and Mrs. R. E. Chase and Mr. Ralph Hinckley received consolation prizes of a most consoling nature. At a late hour a daintily appointed supper was served, the table decorations and favors typifying St. Patrick's day. The feature of the evening was a large green pig in clover which graced the center of the table. A number of unique and mirth-provoking features made the evening an occasion of continual pleasure.

A BIRTHDAY SHOWER.

The members of the Girls' Sewing Club gathered Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Pearl Goode on Cedar street in honor of Miss Goode's birthday anniversary. The dining room was prettily ornamented with masses of poppies and other spring time flowers. The next meeting of the society will be held in the home of Miss Leona Thomas, on Ruth avenue.

A JOLLY STAG PARTY.

Mr. Charles Wells of West Fourth street was host of a delightfully planned and jolly stag party given in his home on Friday evening, to entertain the members of the boys' basket ball team of the high school and the Bar-Z boys. Table decorations were most appropriate to the occasion, the center of the table was graced by a basket ball resting on a mound of violets; places were designated by hand-painted basketballs attached to tiny pennants in each guest's class colors. The general color scheme was violet and white, the colors of the class of '12. Covers were arranged for twelve.

Following the dinner a happy evening was passed with music and cards.

ANNEXATION

Election Saturday, March 30th.—Effort to Knock It Out in the Courts Proves a Failure

Next Saturday the voters of Glendale and the territory outside which it is proposed to annex will have the chance to settle the question whether Glendale shall still further expand. Within the city limits there is practically no opposition. In the outside territory there are still a few misguided individuals who are opposed to the proposition. The total number of voters in the latter territory is 175, and of these the annexation committee feels confident that two-thirds will vote Yes, which will be more than necessary, as only a majority vote is required.

Polling places are as follows:

At tent, northwest corner Howard and Fourth streets.

At tent, 705 North Louise street.

Polls open from 6 to 6.

UNION REVIVAL MEETINGS.

A series of evangelistic meetings are to be held by the churches of Glendale, Tropico and Casa Verdugo. These meetings will commence Wednesday, April 17. A tent seating 1200 or 1500 people will be pitched on the corner of Fourth and Jackson streets. The churches have secured the services of Rev. C. R. Handenschield, a successful and able preacher, and Mr. H. R. Farmer, a talented singer. Arrangements are being made to hold a large number of cottage prayer meetings, also union prayer meetings will be held on Wednesday evenings.

On Sunday evening at 7:30 a union service will be held in the First Methodist church for residents on the east side of town, Rev. Mr. Edmonds of the Presbyterian church being the preacher. At the Christian church another union service will be held, Rev. E. H. Willisford of the Congregational church will be the preacher. Sunday night in Tropico, Rev. Carnes will preach at the Presbyterian church.

TAFT IS CERTAIN OF NOMINATION

Only Thing In Doubt Is Size of His Vote at Chicago.

MAY BREAK 1908 RECORD.

Sentiment Growing In Big Republican States That He Is Only Man of His Party Who Can Be Elected This Year—Voters Satisfied With Administration's Policies.

President William H. Taft is on a fair road to renomination as the Republican standard bearer in the campaign of 1912. With approximately 100 delegates to the Chicago convention already instructed for him, the president is more than likely to break his record of 1908, when he was nominated with 702 votes on the first ballot in the Chicago convention of that year. There is no longer any question that he will be renominated, and the only question now puzzling the managers of the Taft campaign is the completeness of his victory.

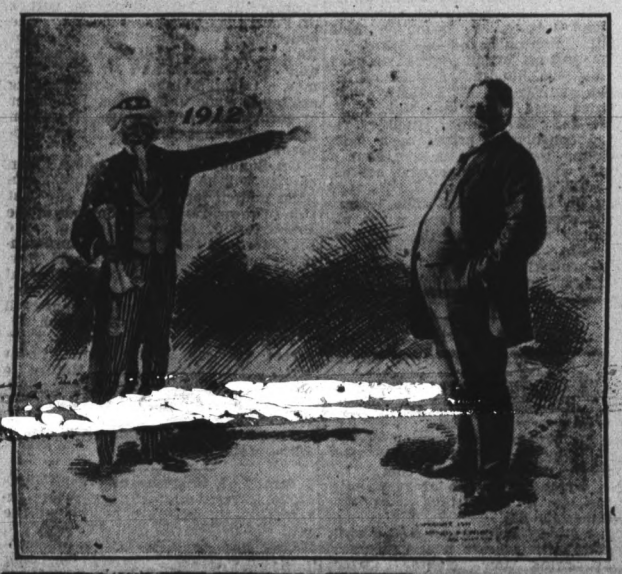
Coupled with the assurance of his renomination is the growing sentiment in the big Republican states both east and west that President Taft is the only Republican candidate who can possibly be elected this fall. It will be recalled readily enough that when Mr. Taft took office three years ago, March 4 last, the great issues of tariff revision and reform on a protective basis and of monetary reform and the great legal problem involved in the exact meaning of the Sherman anti-trust statute were squarely before the country. In the latter issue the supreme court had not made its famous ruling in the Standard Oil and tobacco cases which were to outline for the first time since the law was passed by congress its exact meaning. On each of these three great issues it has been necessary for President Taft to consider and frame a definite policy, and it is his decision as to these great questions that has convinced the business men, the laboring men and the farmers of the country that another term in the White House for William H. Taft is all that is necessary to restore the country on that basis of unparalleled prosperity which characterized the administration of William McKinley. It is this sentiment which not only assures the renomination of Mr. Taft at Chicago, but also his re-election in November.

So many bewildering side issues have become involved in the present campaign for delegates to the Chicago convention that the facts above stated have been overlooked in certain communities. Even the progressive achievements of the Taft administration have been forgotten in the excitement occasioned by the introduction of new political doctrines, practically none of which, except the proposal to recall federal judges, can be dealt with by the national government, but must be decided each state for itself. The demand for a presidential preference primary in each state, wholly a state matter, in which even the president himself has no right to interfere, has been magnified into a national issue notwithstanding the fact that there is and can be no national law on the subject, and only a few states are prepared to throw the protection of the law around any such primary and in face of the fact that one-tenth of the delegates to the Chicago convention are already chosen and hundreds of delegates elected to state and district conventions. It has been estimated that to clothe such a primary with legal authority, as provided by the rules of the party, it would cost the taxpayers of this country not less than $5,000,000 immediately.

The hysteria occasioned by these conditions is now passing away, and the foremost facts staring the voters in the face are the progressive and definite policies of President Taft and the certainty of an immediate improvement in business conditions all over the country following his renomination and re-election. These facts are of vital interest to all classes of citizens, especially when they are confronted with the alternative of a change in administration, a change in policies and a continuation of business depression and general unrest.

In estimating the probabilities of President Taft's renomination and reelection it is necessary to recur only to recent history. The president carried every northern state in 1908. Between the election of that year and 1910 occurred the tariff legislation known as the Payne tariff law. It is a well known maxim of politics that that party which revises the tariff is defeated at the next election, and the only exception to the rule in recent years was the passage of the Dingley law, which was followed so closely by the outbreak of the Spanish-American war as to bury the tariff issue in a wave of patriotic enthusiasm. The more recent by-elections in the big Republican states east of the Mississippi river, notably in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, have shown a return of Republicans to the fold and a restoration of the old time Republican majorities, which justifies the prediction that they will be safely in the Taft column in November. That they will so unanimously support any other Republican candidate, particularly if the third term issue is injected into the fight, is denied by the best informed leaders in those states.

As to the nomination there is no longer any doubt but that President Taft will have a majority of the delegates both from the north and the south. New England will be practically if not entirely solid for him. He will have sweeping victories in New York, Pennsylvania and the other middle Atlantic states. Ohio has never yet failed to support a favorite son candidate or failed to cast its electoral vote for a Republican candidate for president. Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota and Oklahoma of the middle western states will all have their quota of Taft delegates in the convention, four of them having already instructed delegates in some districts for the president. The southern states will be almost unanimous in their support of the president, while in Utah, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Wyoming, Arizona and the Pacific coast states there is every assurance of solid Taft delegations. Present indications point only to a scattering opposition to President Taft's renomination.



Taft For Peace.

It was only by the exercise of rare discretion and tact that war was averted with Mexico nearly a year ago. Had President Taft yielded to the demands of some of the "jingoes" of the country the United States might easily have been plunged into a conflict with its neighbor over fancied wrongs. Without permitting the rights of American citizens to suffer in any respect, Mr. Taft handled a ticklish diplomatic situation with such good judgment that trouble was averted and the friendly relations with Mexico were undisturbed.

Taft's Anti-trust Record.

In the real prosecution of the trusts the administration of President Taft has established a record that is far beyond that of any of his predecessors. Big combinations have been brought to the bar of federal justice, their promoters have been fined for disobeying the Sherman anti-trust law, and the controlling corporations have been disintegrated. The record of the Taft administration stands unequaled in its curbing of illegal combinations and monopolies.

What Theodore Roosevelt Said.

On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES WILL I BE A CANDIDATE FOR OR ACCEPT ANOTHER NOMINATION.—Theodore Roosevelt, Nov. 8, 1904.

I HAVE NOT CHANGED AND SHALL NOT CHANGE THAT DECISION THUS ANNOUNCED.—Theodore Roosevelt, Dec. 11, 1907.

I WILL ACCEPT THE NOMINATION FOR PRESIDENT IF IT IS TENDERED TO ME, and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference.—Theodore Roosevelt, Feb. 24, 1912.

An Interrupted Duel.

A fire engine was recently the means of putting a sudden stop to a duel in Germany. Two physicians quarreled and arranged for a meeting with pistols. The village chief magistrate heard of the proposed duel. He informed the firemen, and together, drawing a machine, they proceeded to the scene of the encounter. Just as the seconds had stepped off the distance a heavy stream of water struck one of the physicians, and a moment later the second doctor was also drenched to the skin. The would be fighters, in their dripping clothes, looked so ridiculous that they both burst out laughing, shook hands and returned to their homes, thanking the ingenious mayor for his intervention.

A View of Jefferson Davis.

Very straight and tall, thin, with a clear cut, clean shaven, distinguished face, with a look half military man, half student, with a demeanor to all of perfect if somewhat chilling courtesy; by temperament a theorist, able with the ability of the field marshal or the scholar in the study, not with that of the reader and master of men, the hardest of workers, devoted, honorable, single minded, a figure on which a fierce light has beaten; a man not perfect nor always just, bound in the toils of his own personality, but yet an able man, who suffered and gave all, believed in himself and in his cause and to the height of his power labored for it day and night. Such a man was Jefferson Davis.—Mary Johnston in "The Long Roll."

They were waiting for dinner, and the virtuoso, who was to play afterward at the musicale, was whiling away the time at the piano. "How would you like a sonata before dinner?" he asked.

"Hardly," returned the host. "I had four on the way home."

Finding a Silver Spoon.

The passengers on an Atlantic liner were at dinner when one of them—he was, by the way, an amateur conjurer and had given a "turn" in the saloon the previous evening—observed a lady present take up a handsome sugar spoon and hide it up her sleeve. He waited till dinner was nearly over, then rose and addressed the company.

He had, he said, remembered another little trick, which he proposed to perform in amplification of his program of the evening before. Going up to the captain, he took from the table a spoon similar to that which the lady had hidden.

"You will see, ladies and gentlemen, I take this spoon and place it in the captain's sleeve."

He did so, bidding the captain grasp the sleeve tightly at the wrist with his disengaged hand.

"Now," he continued, "I will produce the spoon from Mrs. Blank's sleeve."

And, approaching the souvenir hunter, he dexterously did so. The delinquent, crimson with shame and vexation, promptly left the saloon for the solitude of her own stateroom.

Marketing in France.

In France the housewife does very little of the marketing. It is left to the servants. There the servants do the bargaining. If potatoes are 10 cents per pound and the girl can get them from some market woman for 8 cents she reasons that the mistress should not profit by the bargaining, but that she herself should have the difference. The regular price of the potatoes being 10 cents, the servant marks them down in her book at that price and pockets the difference. This is one of the peculiarities of the French method of keeping house, and it has been found a real aid in keeping servants. The housewives are aware of what is taking place, but they are satisfied to pay the regular market prices. It is the bargaining of the servants which gets them an extra allowance, but as long as the eatables are up to the standard the housewife does not complain.—Boston Herald.

His Trophies.

Micky and Pat had been at school together, but had drifted apart in after life. They met one day, and the conversation turned on athletics.

"Did you ever meet my brother Dennis?" asked Pat. "He won a gold medal in a Marathon race."

"Bedad," replied Mike, "sure, and that's fine! But did I ever tell you about my uncle at Ballythomas?"

Pat agreed that he could not call the gent to mind.

"Well," said Mike, "he's got a gold medal for five miles and one for ten miles, a silver medal for swimming, two cups for wrestling and a lot of badges for boxing and cycling."

"Begorra," said Pat, "he must be a great athlete, indade!"

"Bedad," came the reply, "and you are wrong! He keeps the pawnshop!"—London Telegraph.

Tanned Skin.

In the majority of cases tanned skin is an indication of health. It is a condition resulting from the action of chemical rays or of the ultra violet rays of the sun on the pigment of the skin. Tan may be produced also by exposure to the rays of a mercury lamp or it may be caused electrically. But in these cases it is no indication of the state of health. It does not mean that there has been a multiplication of red corpuscles in the blood, such as follows healthful exercise in the open air. The tan acquired by the skin at sea or ashore as a result of life and exercise in the open air is always a sign of health, for the reason that it is accompanied by general conditions that do not obtain in the case of electric tan.—New York Times.

Altitude Loosens Tongues.

"Workmen on high buildings have prejudices that must be respected," said a contractor. "A sedate, well balanced man never likes a talkative neighbor. Height unhinges some men's tongues. Men who are decidedly uncommunicative at street level lay their souls bare 300 feet above ground. That loquacity does not impair their own efficiency. They lay brick or chisel stone just as skillfully, no matter how fast they talk, but their chatter gets on the nerves of other men whose speech is not accelerated by altitude."—New York Press.

Presidents Then and Now.

When Thomas Nickerson, who was president of the Santa Fe before it struck oil, wanted to take a ride he carried his lunch and took a berth with the way freight. That isn't the way of all American railway presidents.—Railroad Man's Magazine.

Mildred — They were married in haste, I understand? Eleanor—Yes; they had engaged a taxicab by the hour, so they requested the minister to hurry.—Exchange.

"Does the office ever really seek the man?"

"Well, yes, sometimes—for instance, when the cashier skips to Canada."—Washington Herald.

Life and Age.

Life does not count by years. Some suffer a lifetime in a day and so grow old between the rising and the setting of the sun.—Augusta Evans.

A Story of Malibran.

Among the stories told by Arthur Pougin of Malibran, the great singer, is one of her stay in Venice. She was to give six performances at one theater there when Gallo, the director of the Teatro Emeronito, being on the eve of bankruptcy, begged her to give two at his theater, promising her £120 for each. She consented, but when Gallo went to take her the second payment he entered, saying, "Here is the sum we agreed on." "What sum?" she replied, with an air of surprise. "Oh, the £120 for yesterday's performance." "I don't want your money. Take it all away and spend it on your children. You shall kiss me and we'll be quits." Did the good fellow believe his ears? His two performances had brought him in £400 in round figures, had saved him from bankruptcy, and, to crown his joy, he kissed Mme. Malibran. This magnanimity to a poor Venetian was received publicly by a frantic ovation and crystalized in verse, while the theater was renamed Malibran.—Argonaut.

Old Egyptian Perfumes.

Priests in Egypt, who were the sole depositaries of science, knew the secret of aromatic substances and prepared them themselves. Egyptian perfumes acquired great celebrity, especially those made in Alexandria. Reserved originally for religious rites, perfumes subsequently became of current use among the wealthy classes. During banquets they were diffused through the halls and were burnt in profusion. The Israelites during their sojourn in Egypt adopted the use of aromatic substances primarily for religious purposes and afterward for personal usage. The Greeks, who loved elegance, were especially addicted to the use of perfumes, and they taught their secrets and usage to the Romans, who were not content to use merely the perfumes of the orient—aloes, myrrh, incense and nard—but also made perfumes similar to those of the present day—scents of lilies, lavender, roses and thyme.

Pretty Lame Excuse.

Out of the crowd in the police court a man was placed before the judge.

"You are accused, sir," said the magistrate, "of being drunk and disorderly. Any defense?"

"I am a respectable man, sir," the prisoner answered, "and this would never have happened only I traveled from Pittsburgh to New York yesterday in bad company."

"What sort of bad company?" said the magistrate.

"Sons of Temperance, sir."

"Sons of Temperance! Why, they are the salt of the earth. I should think they'd be the best company a man like you could ask for."

"No, sir. Excuse me, sir. You're wrong," said the prisoner huskily. "You see, I'd brought a quart of whisky for the journey, and on account of the company I had to drink it all myself."

India Spun Cotton Long Ago.

Lancashire's proud record of 300 years in the cotton trade is far behind India's. Cotton was manufactured to perfection in India more than 3,000 years ago. Thus Thomas Ellison in his "Cotton Trade of Great Britain:" "Fabrics as fine as any that can be turned out at the present day by the most perfect machinery in Lancashire were produced by the nimble fingers of Hindu spinners and the primitive looms of Hindu weavers a thousand years before the invasion of Britain by the Romans." When Britons, in fact, were suffering from their skins Indians were "luxuriating in garments of a texture so fine as to have earned the poetic description of 'woven wind.'" What Lancashire makes today India made the day before yesterday.—London Chronicle.

Your Child.

Does your child break into the conversation when you have visitors?

Does he leave his clothes lying all over the house?

Does he eat surreptitiously between meals?

Does he lay his hands on almost anything he wants to make something out of without asking your permission?

Does he come down late to breakfast?

Does he say "Huh," "Gee?"

And, if not, why not. You are his parent, and he is living in the United States of America.—Life.

The Puzzle of Life.

Life is a quaint puzzle. Bits the most incongruous join into each other, and the scheme thus gradually becomes symmetrical and clear, when, lo, as the infant clasps his hands and cries, "See, see; the puzzle is made out!" all the pieces are swept back into the box—black box with the gilded nails!—Bulwer-Lytton.

High and Worthy.

She—I'm afraid I cannot marry you. I want a man who possesses a noble ambition, one whose heart is set on attaining some high and worthy object. He—Well, don't I want you? She—Oh, George, darling. I am yours!—Boston Transcript.

The Refrain.

She (at the piano)—How do you enjoy this refrain?

He—Very much. The more you refrain the better I like it.—Judge.

Spiteful.

Miss Joyce—Yes, Jack and I are to become partners for life. Miss Means—And you will be the senior partner. How nice!

Beware of dissipating your powers. Strive constantly to concentrate them.

Clams That Drown Men.

Those of us whose acquaintance with clams embraces only the Little Neck variety are slow to think evil of any members of so delightful a family, but the inoffensive Little Neck has some big brothers who vigorously resent any attempt to pry into their personal affairs. Men have accidentally stepped into the open jaws of these huge clams at low tide, and the clams, closing their jaws, have held them fast until the tide rose, when the men were drowned. Other men have reached for a lure in the form of a luminous spot. The instant they touched it the shells of a clam closed on their arms, and in a few minutes the men were drowned. Some of these clams that trap men are founded imbedded in the coral reefs of the Pacific and Indian oceans, and the men captured are pearl divers. The flesh of one of these huge clams sometimes weighs twenty pounds, and added to that is the 500 pounds or more of shell. The shell is sometimes five feet long by two and three-quarters wide.—New York Herald.

The Moon's Mission.

Some partisans of final causes have imagined that the moon was given to the earth to afford it light during the night, but in this case nature would not have attained the end proposed since we are often deprived at the same time of the light of both sun and moon. To have accomplished this end it would have been sufficient to have placed the moon at first in opposition to the sun and in the plane of the elliptic at a distance from the earth equal to the one hundredth part of the distance of the earth from the sun and to have impressed on the earth and moon parallel velocities proportional to their distances from the sun. In this case the moon, being constantly in opposition to the sun, would have described round it an ellipse similar to that of the earth. These two bodies would then constantly succeed each other, and as at this distance the moon could not be eclipsed its light would always replace that of the sun.—Laplace.

The Transforming Touch of Genius.

The genius in tailoring accomplishes without effort things that refuse to yield to the most determined efforts of the ordinary mortal. He apparently creates out of nothing. His touch transforms the shape of the customer and the set of the garment. He molds the ungainly form into an Apollo, and the misfit garment falls into natural place in his hands. The lines of his draft are unapproachable, and his system is infallible. He knows just when the shoulder is to be advanced or receded; he understands intuitively just how much the waist is to be suppressed or filled in and how much spring is required. He never makes a mistake, and if the journeyman ruins a garment beyond repair in the making the genius sets it right with a few touches, even though to repair it is beyond the ordinary cutter's skill.—Tailor and Cutter.

Close Mouthed.

When Austin Lane Crothers was governor of Maryland he had the reputation of being harder to get information out of than any man the Maryland reporters ever knew. He wouldn't talk about any official matter.

A reporter who knew him very well was trying to find out whether he would call a special session of the legislature.

"Mr. Crothers," said the reporter, "in your conversations with Governor Crothers what does the governor say to you about a special session of the general assembly?"

"My son," whispered the governor, "the governor never talks to me on the subject. I can't get a word out of the close mouthed old rascal."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Poser.

It had been explained to a man that mathematics, politics, ethics and gymnastics "is." The plural form bothered him until somebody said: "Well, did you ever hear of a mathematic, a politic, an ethic or a gymnastic?"

The doubter retired in confusion, but came back triumphantly from retirement after a while.

"Say, you wise guys," said he, "tell me the singular of dandruff."—Chicago Post.

Shaftesbury's Retort.

When a member of a church congress at Manchester argued that the introduction of the custom of cremation would endanger belief in the resurrection of the dead the reply of Lord Shaftesbury silenced any further doubt when he asked, "What, then, has become of the holy martyrs who were cremated?"

A Good Record For Both.

"I've driven my car for over a year now," said Bilkins, "and I've never run down anybody."

"That's nothing," said Mrs. Bilkins. "I've attended the meetings of our sewing circle for five years and have never run down anybody."—Harper's Weekly.

Turned Down.

"Pardon me," said the masher, "but you look like a young lady I know."

"Pardon me," interrupted Miss Bright, "but you look like a man I don't know."—Exchange.

Not What He Expected.

She—Say, are those poems in the paper signed "Oedipus" yours? He—Yes. She—Well, the girls persisted that they were, but I always spoke up for you.—Fliegende Blatter.

We do not learn to know men through their coming to us. To find out what sort of persons they are we must go to them.—Goethe.

Curious Benefits of Drought.

Drought is dreaded by farmers and gardeners because it injures grass and grain, fruits and flowers, but scientific observers testify that it brings as a compensation subtle gifts which enrich the soil and increase future crops. Nature has stored in the earth a rich supply of phosphates, silicates, carbonates and other chemical salts essential to vegetable life. Those on the surface of the ground are soon exhausted, and the large supply at greater depths is often unreached by subsoil plowing. But a drought is nature's subsoil plow to bring up the rich nutriment below. When the surface is parched the sun draws moisture from the deeper soil, and this moisture brings with it in solution salts of lime and magnesia, of potash and soda. The moisture evaporates, but leaves the salts for the use of plants and grain. Drought, therefore, does a double work. It parches the surface and lessens the present crop. It forces up rich nutriment from the deeper soil and enlarges future crops.—Harper's Weekly.

Sense In the Sickroom.

Every one who goes into a sick person's room should be bright and cheerful. Sick people are extremely sensitive to the manner of those around them, and any depressing influence has a most injurious effect. Hope is the best medicine. Unfortunately, the sick person's relatives often take the worst view of the case, and their anxiety is unmistakably manifested by their looks, voice and general manner. They even talk despairingly in the room, thinking that because the patient is quiet and dull he does not understand. But his perception of everything relating to his illness is markedly acute. Note the good effects of the visit of a cheery doctor. For hours after the patient seems better and is better. Of course it does not do to be flippant, but if relatives would force themselves to take a hopeful view and show it in their manner they would in many cases actually save the sick person's life.

GLENDALE, CAL., MARCH 29, 1912

The late primaries in Milwaukee indicate that the experiment with Socialism there has not been a success.

Beginning on Thursday, March 28th, Glendale starts in on a perfect carnival of elections—a second occurs on the 30th, a third and fourth on the 5th and 8th, respectively—four in twelve days. In the classic language of the day, we are "going some."

At Rialto the orange shippers are having success with a scheme for the detection of frozen oranges. The oranges are put into a vessel containing coal oil, the frozen ones floating while the good fruit sinks and is passed on to another receptacle where it is washed and brushed. It is claimed that the scheme is a perfect success.

In selecting Mrs. Ella C. Witham as their representative candidate for the position of school trustee, the women of Glendale have shown excellent judgment. Mrs. Witham as a member of the Tuesday Afternoon Club and of the library board has shown the possession of good business sense, and will make an ideal school trustee, free from fads and fancies.

In putting a free sugar plank in their platform, as they probably will, the Democrats are certainly playing good politics. But when they put in another plank declaring themselves in favor of giving up the Philippines, we recognize the old familiar and undying hoodoo that prompts them so often, providentially perhaps, to do the wrong thing. The people of the United States are not land grabbers, but their history shows that although not acquisitive, they have a way of holding on to what they get!

The shattered hulk of the poor old Maine has been towed out into deep water and sunk with all the honors of war. The person as yet to the world unknown who touched the button and struck the electric spark that blew up the warship with its unfortunate crew, must if living be haunted by the spectres of his victims, but the world at large gives them but little thought in considering the great events that followed in the wake of that tragedy. The greatest beneficiaries of the war with Spain were Cuba and the Philippines, to both of which were opened the doors of possibility.

By an unfortunate oversight in last week's issue of this paper, the name of Mr. T. W. Watson was omitted from our list of candidates, who being incumbents and having good records, deserve the support of the people. Always having been a supporter of Mr. Watson in his political life, we know of no reason at this time why we should reverse ourselves. The article alluded to should have read as follows, and expresses our sentiments now as then: "Mr. G. B. Woodberry, as city clerk; Mr. G. B. Hoffman, as treasurer, and Messrs. O. A. Lane and T. W. Watson as trustees, have all been tried and proved to be exceptionally good public servants and every consideration of the public service calls for their re-election.

The war between the Eagle Rockers and the railway company in which the former are trying to force the latter to grant a five-cent fare, goes on merrily. It is difficult to see justice in the contention that if a five-mile limit is pulled out to seven miles by an annexation election, the railroad company must look pleasant and add the two additional miles to the ride without an extra fare. There may be certain circumstances which would change the aspect of the affair, but just at present it seems as if there is a feeling abroad to the effect that a railroad company has no rights which the people are bound to respect, a rather demoralizing theory to work upon.

THE COMING SCHOOL ELECTION.

At the school election which takes place next Friday, April 5th, the voters will have the responsibility of choosing three trustees who shall manage our schools for the coming year. A large number of good citizens have been named for the positions and from the list voters should be able to make a wise selection, remembering the importance of the places to be filled. This paper has no particular ticket to urge upon the people, but the platform of the Citizens' League is one that should be subscribed to by all aspirants. It is as follows:

"We, the undersigned candidates, pledge ourselves to serve our term if elected, and also to give to Glendale the best schools for the least money, so as to make it as light a burden on the taxpayers as possible."

There are now three schools in the district and a fourth will no doubt be added during the next few months. To get the best working results it would seem advisable to distribute the trustees so that there shall be one of them residing near to one of the school houses so that it may be in his especial care, and other considerations being reasonably equal the residence location of the candidates should be considered with this object in view. A full list of candidates will be found elsewhere.

The I. W. W. wanderers who beat their way on railroad trains from town to town which they infest with their presence, are not needy men in search of employment, but victims of the wanderlust and of the envy of their fellowmen who retain the old-fashioned idea that man must work if he would eat. Work is the last thing that these gentry want. They are the incarnation of the spirit of unrest, and anarchy that is abroad in the land. It was only a few years ago that the Coxey army started from the Pacific coast and finally arrived in part in Washington. "General" Coxey found his leadership a paying proposition and has since been living in ease made possible by the acquisition of wealth. Kearney in San Francisco, thirty years ago, also found the leadership of the "downtrodden" a profitable business and spent the last years of his life amid the surroundings of wealth.

During the Coxey era a company of "labor seekers," two hundred or so, were camping in Los Angeles among the willows along the river. At that time the Santa Fe Railroad company was putting in a spur track in that vicinity and a large number of men being needed, an agent was sent to the willows to secure them. Out of the camp of two hundred men less than a dozen accepted the work that was offered them and at the end of three days only one or two men held onto their jobs. The whole human race are gullible, but the gullibility of the average working man is beyond compare.

ANNEXATION.

The election to take place tomorrow (Saturday) for the annexation to Glendale of a large territory on the north, including a portion of Verdugo Canon, is one of great importance to the city and the outside territory concerned. The object of the city in this effort to extend its boundaries is not to acquire property for the purpose of taxation or revenue, but as far as the canon territory is concerned and the acreage adjoining, is primarily to secure more jurisdiction over the general water supply than is afforded by the state law. Under the practical application of the general statutes a nuisance cannot be guarded against, it can only be abated. Under the application of city ordinances certain things can be prohibited because they threaten to become a nuisance, a distinction which can readily be appreciated when applied to the question of maintaining the purity of the water. Taxation not being the object of the city, it follows logically that the assessment of all acreage within the corporate limits will be made as light as possible, the city authorities recognizing the fact that the owners thereof are entitled to all possible consideration. Benefit will accrue however even to the farming lands annexed in more ways than one to all owners who convert their lands into homesteads either in the form of lots and acreage. The protection of municipal laws and municipal officers even although never required, is valuable in the sense that it is attainable. It adds a sense of security in the minds of prospective home builders which is a real asset and therefore of value. There will be tangible value in the obtaining, even if not immediately, of the advantage of the municipal lighting system, and protection against undesirable resorts. Considerable of the opposition to annexation at present comes from individuals who object to anything in the way of control by law. As for the section proposed to be annexed that is more thickly populated, the arguments in favor of becoming a part of the city are so many and so familiar that it is not necessary to enumerate them—they are self-evident—and the people who initiated the movement and petitioned for the calling of the election so that they might be included in the city, have merely exercised an intelligent self-interest.

The School Question—Messrs. Blackburn and Meeker Answer "Patron's" Inquiry

In answer to "Patron" of last week:

The intermediate school idea, as it is carried out in Glendale, is not an entirely new idea, even in Glendale.

A year ago last fall, sewing for the girls and wood sloyd for the boys was introduced, and it proved one of the best moves ever taken by your school board.

Sloyd in smaller kinds of work, sofa pillows, raffia baskets and other work for the hands is a part of the work required by the county board, and has been for years.

Wood sloyd and sewing were taught in the schools a year before they were put up to the people.

May 26, 1911, the matter was put up to the people at a regularly called meeting, and a committee, consisting of Messrs. Lane, Muhlman, Doll, Emery and Shropshire, was appointed to report on the questions of sites and buildings, etc.

June 3 they reported, favoring "a two-room building for intermediate work," which was amended to call for a six-room building, and then adopted, on June 17, at an adjourned meeting. An amended report, signed by the same committee, called for a "two-story brick school building for intermediate use, containing eight rooms, including an auditorium."

So "Patron" will see that the intermediate school, so far as we have it, was adopted by the action of freeholders' meetings twice.

As to the supervising principal: The principals in the Fourth Street and Sixth Street schools were and are doing good work, each in her own school. The people decided on an intermediate school, which required another principal. The board made the principal of this school supervising principal, because in their judgment it was the best thing to do.

No city with three to five schools would think for one minute of trying to run them as separate schools, without a common head.

Has the experiment so far justified the expense?

The separation of the seventh and eighth grades from the lower grades has been a distinct advantage to both the lower and the higher grades.

Boys are willing to give up holidays and work all day in the sloyd room. Nothing has created so great an interest in the school as have the sloyd and sewing classes.

As a man interested in the best things for the schools, as a man with a normal school training, as a member of your school board for four years, I answer unqualifiedly that the experiment has more than justified the expense.

I want to call the attention specially of Mr. Porcher to the fact stated above—that the fathers, mothers and voters have waked up, some of them, and on the dates above stated did say what kind of schools and what kind of buildings they wanted.

R. A. BLACKBURN.

ANSWER TO "PATRON."

Why was the intermediate school established?

It became necessary to provide more room to accommodate the increase in our schools. The school grounds at Sixth street were so badly crowded that the Parent-Teachers Association secured additional lots for playgrounds for the seventh and eighth grades. There was then, and is now, a general feeling among school authorities that the seventh and eighth grades should be segregated from the smaller children for the good of both.

The intermediate school as planned here is not an experiment. It has been in existence for years in Oakland, Fresno and other cities under the name of central grammar schools.

Who was asking that Glendale be given an intermediate school? The voters who carried the bonds to build the school—and a two-thirds vote was required to do it.

As to the supervising principal, there is not a school district in the country, and perhaps not in the state, as large as ours, without a head to its schools. The principals at Fourth street and Sixth street were doing good work, or they would not have been retained, but a principal for the intermediate was necessary, and the board thought best to employ as principal of that school one who had had previous experience in supervising city schools as supervising principal.

As to Pasadena, she has a group system for sloyd and domestic science, such as our intermediate school gives us.

Now as to the expense: Additional facilities had to be provided anyway, and I believe that the expense has been less under present conditions, considering that we have built a one-room bungalow out of the special tax, because the main building had only five rooms and we had six grades, than it would have been with any other plan. Had we built an eight-room building in some other part of the district, we must have had seven teachers and a principal. We have employed three and a principal.

The population of this school district is growing perhaps faster than any other suburb of Los Angeles. The money for one year's school is apportioned on a basis of the previous year's attendance, and therefore a special tax has to be raised if we wish to maintain good schools.

The intermediate school enables the music to be taught in large classes—one room for sloyd to be enough for the district—same for cooking and for sewing. The county board prescribes the course of study, and we follow it.

If "Patron" will go with me, I will be glad to go through the school with him, and he may become thoroughly informed at first hand.

R. W. MEEKER.

ANNEXATION

On Monday last the city trustees were served with summonses to appear in the superior court, Judge Hutton, Los Angeles, and show cause why an injunction should not issue against the holding of the annexation election on Saturday next. Of course the move was planned so as to give the defendants as little time for preparation as possible, only forty-eight hours elapsing between the service of the papers and the time for appearance. City Attorney Evans acknowledged this handicap at the trustees' meeting Monday evening, and was authorized to get legal assistance and "go to it." At 10 o'clock Wednesday morning all of the trustees, except Mr. Williams, with City Clerk Woodberry, were in court. Mr. Walter Haas represented the plaintiffs (J. B. and Vincente Verdugo), and it goes without saying that he did it very ably, for Mr. Haas is an able attorney and well versed in municipal law. Mr. Mattison B. Jones and Glendale's city attorney, W. E. Evans, represented the trustees. The principal contentions of Mr. Haas were two, viz.: That the trustees erred in calling the election by a resolution passed the same night the petition was received, he asserting that it should have been called by an ordinance, which procedure requires a week's delay before completion. In the second place, the trustees did not verify the signatures to the petition, but left the matter to the city clerk. He also alleged informality in regard to the form of ballot and some other minor matters. He made indeed a very good showing, and from questions asked now and then by the court it looked for a while as if there would be no election next Saturday. Notwithstanding the short time given for preparation, however, Messrs. Jones and Evans had the matter well in hand, and had dug up some decisions of the supreme court which as they claimed covered the case. Mr. Jones depended mostly upon a decision given by the higher court in which the city of Ontario was concerned, the cases being apparently similar. After Messrs. Haas and Jones had made their main arguments on the several points involved the matter finally simmered down to the question whether the decision in the Ontario case would apply. The two lawyers debated the question for a half hour with a beautiful informality, the judge taking notes meanwhile. Finally Judge Hutton agreed with the attorneys for the city that the supreme court decision in the case quoted held good, and gave decision upholding the demurrer presented by Messrs. Jones and Evans. Mr. Haas submitted gracefully, filing no objections, and now the case goes to the people. Great credit is due the city's lawyers for their skillful handling of the case, and to the city clerk, Mr. Woodberry, for having prepared the election call with the care that was necessary to stand the fierce attack made upon it.

Vote for Annexation.

GOOD TIDINGS FROM SAN JACINTO

Great Excitement Over New Water Discovery.

An immense Underground Lake of Water has been discovered near San Jacinto, California. A mere crust of earth, in some places but a few feet in thickness, has shielded for ages an immense body of water, sufficient to flood the entire country for miles around, which means that this fertile, semi-tropical beauty spot will in short order be the Garden of Eden of the whole State. All these lands are unsurpassed in fertility, productiveness and climatic conditions. All of which is proven by the thousands of acres of beautiful orchards and thrifty ranches under a previous water development. We state, without fear of contradiction, that this neighborhood contains a greater number of well-kept fruit orchards than any other section of equal size in the whole State of California, and we state further that they will show a much greater percentage of profit. There is no scale or pests to fight, or failures to sadden the heart.

A Committee with autos has been appointed to show everybody around free, and we extend a hearty invitation to all of our good neighbors to see this beautiful little Valley of ours in all its glory. Come over on the Santa Fe in the morning, back in the evening. The San Jacinto Board of Trade, San Jacinto, Cal.

"THE MISSION PLAY."

Considerable progress has been made in building the special theater for John Stephen McGroarty's Mission Play at San Gabriel, near Los Angeles. Work has gone ahead steadily in spite of the severe rains, the roof having been put in place prior to the worst of the period.

Henry Kabierske, designer and director of historical pageants from Munich to San Diego, and who has designed and will direct the production of the Mission Play, reports the receipts of large quantities of material for interior finish and decoration. The machinery for the stage and much of the scenic equipment has been received. One thousand comfortable theater chairs await unpacking. Everything indicates an early opening.

Meantime the none less important part of rehearsing the production of The Mission Play is under the direction of several competent theatrical managers. The assembling of the 250 supernumeries, who will form the background for the twenty-six principals, has been a task requiring keen discrimination, and exceptional skill. Persons possessed of a good singing and speaking voice, of good appearance, or of peculiar personality to fit the hundred odd parts have been searched out, and the work of drilling them commenced.

Costuming so many people, so that the dress of the seventy-odd years covered in the action of The Mission Play may be true to the periods represented, is a large task, calling for careful attention to detail and historical correctness. Mr. Kabierske has spared no pains in this department of the production, and the costuming will be splendid and correct.

Naturally, The Mission Play theater will conform to the style of architecture, recognized as distinctly Californian, introduced into this wonderful country by the Mission Padres, about whose struglges, triumphs and death the three-act pageant play treats. It faces the century old San Gabriel, just across El Camino Real, and will closely resemble the old building in exterior finish.

TROPICO.

Everything in the building line in the Richardson tract is going humming along. Much more building material was received on the tract this week and several new homes were started. In the tract which is being prepared for the market by the Pacific Home Builders south of the Pacific Electric lines, the streets are being cut through the property and the entire tract will be ready in about two weeks. The Jap gardens which covered this tract are going down before the rush of prosperity.

CHAPTER XX.

THE HEAD HUNTERS.

"THAT fella boy he sick," Binu Charley said, pointing to a Poonga-Poonga man whose shoulder had been scratched by an arrow an hour before.

The boy was sitting down and groaning, his arms clasping his bent knees, his head drooped forward and rolling painfully back and forth. For fear of poison, Sheldon had immediately scarified the wound and injected permanganate of potash; but in spite of the precaution the shoulder was swelling rapidly.

"We'll take him on to where Tudor is lying," Joan said. "The walking will help to keep up his circulation and scatter the poison. Adamu Adam, you take hold that boy. Maybe he will want to sleep. Shake him up. If he sleep he die."

The advance was more rapid now, for Binu Charley placed the captive bushman in front of him and made him clear the runway of traps. Once, at a sharp turn where a man's shoulder would unavoidably brush against a screen of leaves, the bushman displayed great caution as he spread the leaves aside and exposed the head of a sharp pointed spear, so set that the casual passerby would receive at the least a nasty scratch.

The sun sinking behind a lofty western peak brought on an early but lingering twilight, and the expedition plodded on through the evil forest—the place of mystery and fear, of death swift and silent and horrible, of brutish appetite and degraded instinct, of human life that still wallowed in the primeval slime, of savagery degenerate and abysmal.

They turned aside from the runway at a place indicated by Binu Charley and came to an immense banyan tree half an acre in extent that made in the innermost heart of the jungle a denser jungle of its own. From out of its black depths came the voice of a man singing in a cracked eerie voice.

"My word, that big fella marster he no die!"

The singing stopped, and the voice, faint and weak, called out a hello. Joan answered, and then the voice explained:

"I'm not wandering. I was just singing to keep my spirits up. Have you got anything to eat?"

Tudor, having pulled through the fever and started to mend, was still frightfully weak and very much starved. So badly swollen was he from mosquito bites that his face was unrecognisable. Joan had her own ointments along and she prefaced their application by fomenting his swollen features with hot clothes. Sheldon, with an eye to the camp and the preparations for the night, looked on and felt the pangs of jealousy at every contact of her hands with Tudor's face and body. Somehow, engaged in their healing ministrations, they no longer seemed to him boy's hands.

The morning's action had been settled the night before. Tudor was to stay behind in his banyan refuge and gather strength while the expedition proceeded. On the far chance that they might rescue even one solitary survivor of Tudor's party, Joan was fixed in her determination to push on. With Tudor, Adamu Adam and Arahu were to stop as guards.

Binu Charley led the way, by proxy, however, for by means of the poisoned spear he drove the captive bushman ahead. They plodded on, panting and sweating in the humid, stagnant air. They were immersed in a sea of wanton, prodigal vegetation.

Caught by surprise fifteen feet in the air above the path in the forks of a many branched tree, a bushman dropped like a shadow, naked as on his natal morn. It was hard for them to realize that it was a man, for he seemed a weird jungle sprite, a goblin of the forest. Only Binu Charley was not perturbed. He flung his poisoned spear over the head of the captive at the flitting form. It was a mighty cast, well intended, but the shadow, leaping, received the spear harmlessly between the legs and, tripping upon it, was flung sprawling. Before he could get away Binu Charley was upon him, clutching him by his snow white hair. He was only a young man and a dandy at that, his face blackened with charcoal, his hair whitened with wood ashes, with the freshly severed tail of a wild pig thrust through his perforated nose and two more thrust through his ears. His only other ornament was a necklace of human finger bones. At sight of their other prisoner he chattered in a high querulous falsetto, with puckered brows and troubled, wild animal eyes. He was disposed of along the middle of the line, one of the Poonga-Poonga men leading him at the end of a length of bark rope.

"Close up he stop," Binu Charley warned them in a whisper.

Even as he spoke, from high overhead came the deep resonant boom of a village drum. But the beat was slow. There was no panic in the sound. The runway now became a deeply worn path, rising so steeply that several times the party paused for breath.

"One man with a rifle could hold it against a thousand," Sheldon whispered to Joan. "And twenty men could hold it with spears and arrows."

They came out on the village, situated on a small, upland plateau, grass covered and with only occasional trees. There was a wild chorus of warning cries from the women, and spears and arrows began to fall among the invaders. At Sheldon's command the Tahitians and Poonga-Poonga men got into action with their rifles. The spears and arrows ceased, the last bushmen disappeared, and the fight was over almost as soon as it had begun. On their own side no one had been hurt, while half a dozen bushmen had been killed.

"Poor brutes," Joan said. "They act only according to their natures. To eat their kind and take heads is good morality for them."

"But they should be taught not to take white men's heads," Sheldon argued.

She nodded approval and said: "If we find one head we'll burn the village. Hey, you, Charley! What fella place head he stop?"

"S'pose he stop along devil-devil house," was the answer. "That big fella house, he devil-devil."

It was the largest house in the village. Into it they went. Crouched before a slow smoking fire, in the littered ashes of a thousand fires, was an old man who blinked apathetically at the invaders. His task, it seemed, was to tend the fire, and, hung in the smoke, they found the object of their search. Joan turned and stumbled out hastily, deathly sick, reeling into the sunshine and clutching at the air for support.

"See if all are there," she called back faintly and tottered aimlessly on for a few steps, breathing the air in great drafts and trying to forget the sight she had seen.

Upon Sheldon fell the unpleasant task of tallying the heads. They were all there, nine of them, white men's heads, the faces of which he had been familiar with when their owners had camped in Berande compound and set up the poling boats. Binu Charley, hugely interested, lent a hand, turning the heads around for identification, noting the hatchet strokes and remarking the distorted expressions.

Other heads, thoroughly sun dried and smoke cured, were found in abundance, but, with two exceptions, they were the heads of blacks.

"Me savvee black Mary, me savvee white Mary," quoth Binu Charley "Me no savvee that fella Mary. What name belong him?"

Sheldon looked. Ancient and withered, blackened by many years of the smoke of the devil-devil house, nevertheless the shrunken, mummylike face was unmistakably Chinese. How it had come there was the mystery. It was a woman's head, and he had never heard of a Chinese woman in the history of the Solomons. From the ears hung two inch long earrings, and at Sheldon's direction the Binu man rubbed away the accretions of smoke and dirt and from under his fingers appeared the polished green of jade, the sheen of pearl and the warm red of oriental gold. The other head, equally ancient, was a white man's, and Sheldon wondered what forgotten beche-de-mer fisherman or sandalwood trader had gone to furnish that ghastly trophy.

Telling Binu Charley to remove the earrings and directing the Poonga-Poonga men to carry out the old fire tender, Sheldon cleared the devil-devil house and set fire to it. Soon every house was blazing merrily, while the ancient fire tender sat upright in the sunshine, blinking at the destruction of his village. Every member of Tudor's expedition was accounted for, and it was a long, dark way out of the head hunters' country. Releasing their two prisoners, who leaped away like startled deer, they plunged down the steep path into the steaming jungle.

That night found them back in camp with Tudor, and at high noon of the third day, traveling with the current and shooting the rapids, the expedition arrived at Berande. Joan, with a sigh, unbuckled her revolver belt and hung it on the nail in the living room, while Sheldon, who had been lurking about for the sheer joy of seeing her perform that particular homecoming act, sighed, too, with satisfaction. But the homecoming was not all joy to him, for Joan set about nursing Tudor and spent much time on the veranda when he lay in the hammock under the mosquito netting.

The ten days of Tudor's convalescence that followed were peaceful days on Berande. The work of the plantation went on like clockwork. With the crushing of the premature outbreak of Gogoomy and his following all insubordination seemed to have vanished. Twenty more of the old time boys, their term of service up, were carried away by the Martha, and the fresh stock of labor, treated fairly, was proving of excellent quality. As Sheldon rode about the plantation acknowledging to himself the comfort and convenience of a horse and wondering why he had not thought of getting one himself, he pondered the various improvements for which Joan was responsible.

There were times when he was dizzy with thought of her and love of her, when he would stop his horse and with closed eyes picture her as he had seen her that first day in the stern sheets of the whaleboat, dashing madly in to shore and marching belligerently along his veranda to remark that it was pretty hospitality, this letting strangers sink or swim in his front yard.

It was patent to Sheldon that Tudor had become interested in Joan. Often after his morning ride over the plantation or coming in from the store or from inspection of the copra drying, Sheldon found the pair of them together on the veranda, Joan listening intent and excited and Tudor deep in some recital of personal adventure at the ends of the earth.

Sheldon noticed, too, the way Tudor looked at her and followed her about with his eyes, and in those eyes he noted a certain hungry look and on the face a certain wistful expression; and he wondered if on his own face he carried a similar involuntary advertisement. He was sure of several things—first, that Tudor was not the right man for Joan and could not possibly make her permanently happy; next, that Joan was too sensible a girl really to fall in love with a man of such superficial stamp, and, finally, that Tudor would blunder his love making somehow. And at the same time, with true lover's anxiety, Sheldon feared that the other might somehow fall to blunder and win the girl with purely fortuitous and successful meretricious show.

The situation was very unsatisfactory and perplexing. Sheldon played the difficult part of waiting and looking on, while his rival devoted himself energetically to reaching out and grasping at the fluttering prize. He did not belong to Berande, and, now that he was well and strong again, it was time for him to go. Instead of which Tudor had settled himself down comfortably, resumed swimming, went dynamiting fish with Joan, spent hours with her hunting pigeons, trapping crocodiles and at target practice with rifle and revolver.

But there were certain traditions of hospitality that prevented Sheldon from breathing a hint that it was time for his guest to take himself off. And in similar fashion, feeling that it was not playing the game, he fought down the temptation to warn Joan. Had he known anything, not too serious to Tudor's detriment, he would have been unable to utter it, but the worst of it was that he knew nothing at all against the man.

A Royal Superstition.

Canterbury cathedral, England, like most Catholic cathedrals, is decorated with innumerable niches for statues. At Canterbury a series of these niches is occupied with statues of kings and queens of England, and there are only four niches left unoccupied. An old tradition has it that when all the niches are filled the throne of England will come to an end. Queen Victoria was approached with a view to a statue of herself being placed in one of the four remaining niches, but her late majesty was aware of the old tradition and refused. One wonders whether in the future there will be four monarchs of England sufficiently indifferent to superstition to defy the tradition and allow their effigies to fill the unoccupied spaces.

Rabbits and Squirrels as Swimmers.

A funny though able swimmer is the rabbit. He submerges his body with the exception of head and tail. The latter sticks away up into the air, and his hind legs make "soap suds" as he churns the water madly to get away. But with all his awkwardness he is a swift swimmer and is only beaten by the squirrel among the land animals.

The squirrel swims with his heavy tail sunk away down in the water and his head held high. He cleaves the waves like a duck, and a man in a rowboat has all he can do to keep abreast of the swimming squirrel.

Entirely Too Literal.

Some people are too literal for anything. A young man gave a graphic description of a narrow escape that he had recently had from an enraged bull:

"I seized him by the tail!" he exclaimed, "an' there I was. I was afraid to hold on and I dare not let go."

"Between the horns of a dilemma, as it were," ventured a young lady, very much interested.

"No," replied the young man; "I wasn't between the horns at all, an', besides, he wasn't a dilemma; he was a Jersey."—London Mail.

The Unfinished Creation.

Men ever mislead themselves in science by not perceiving that all things on their globe are related and co-ordinated to the general evolution to a constant movement and production which bring with them necessarily both advancement and an end. Man himself is not a finished creation. If he were God would not be.—Honore de Balzac.

Graceful Women of India.

Describing the women of India, a writer says: "Even the most withered toil worn hag has a dignity of carriage and a grace of motion that the western woman might envy. The sari is draped in an easy flowing style and adjusted as it slips back with a graceful turn of the silver bangled arm, the skinny legs move rhythmically and the small feet fall with a silent and pantherlike tread. It is the beauty of natural and untrammeled motion and says much in favor of the abolition of the corset, for the Indian women retain their uprightness and suppleness of figure till bowed with age. The commonest type is the coolie woman, who undertakes all sorts of rough work, carrying heavy burdens on her head, and she is perhaps the least attractive, for her workaday garments are usually faded and dirty, yet even among this poor class of burden bearers we see many with handsome, straight features and supple, well proportioned figures. No matter how poor their garments, jewelry of some sort is worn—necklaces of gold or beads, colored glass or silver bangles and heavy silver anklets."

The Asylum Debating Club.

"This is a wonderful place," said a man in the grounds of a lunatic asylum near Edinburgh to a casual visitor. "Everything is in such excellent order, so agreeable too. They have concerts and balls, and, more than that, what do you think? They have a debating society."

"Indeed!" said the visitor. "A debating society?"

"Yes. They are debating just now, and if you like," suggested the man, "I will show you how they proceed. But when they see you take no particular notice. Should they address you merely say, 'Let me not disturb you, gentlemen; I am daft.'"

The lunatic—for such he really was—conducted the visitor into a room of the asylum and left him, not in the presence of lunatics, but with the board of governors of the institution, who were just then sitting.—London Answers.

Chewing the Crude Rubber.

About the first process rubber goes through on the way to become a tire or tube is mastication. After the crude Para is washed it is broken up into lumps and tossed into the crackers. These are machines with heavy rollers, which take the rubber in between them and chew it. Entering the masticating room of a factory, the first impression is that there is a brush fire burning or else there is a den of snakes at hand. The rubber snaps and crackles like burning branches and then hisses shudderingly. The stuff is kept at until it comes up in regular sheets, very thin and looking like a sort of cake dusted with crumbs. Then after thorough drying in vacuum chambers it is ready to be put in with the chemicals and other things that make up the compound.—New York Sun.

Changed With the Change.

There was an old negro in a small Tennessee town who had been stealing a great deal. He would go all over the town taking anything he could get in the form of clothing or food. One day he became very ill. He grew worse, and it seemed that he was going to die. As death approached he began to repent of his robberies. He called his son to him and told him to return all the clothing he had stolen. After this he became easier and went to sleep. In several hours he awoke.

"Mirandy," he said, "am Sam took back dem clothes yet?"

"No," said Mirandy, "Sam am still here."

"Well," said the old negro, "tell him to hold on a bit. I believe I's gitting a leetle better."—World Today.

The Dead Watch.

During the rebellion of 1745 a highlander came into possession of a watch. The thing was strange to him and its use unknown to him, and its beauty and its constant ticking gave him pleasure. That night the watch ran down, and the ticking ceased. The highlander now was disgusted with his toy and sought for some one to buy it. A purchaser was soon found at a low price. When the watch and the money had changed hands, the highlander, chuckling over his bargain, said, "Why, she died last night."—London Express.

London's Crystal Palace.

Crystal palace was originally built in Hyde park for the great exhibition of 1851, being afterward removed to its present site and re-erected. At the first state opening of the palace by Queen Victoria it was urged that the usual artillery salute should not be fired, the reason given being that the concussion would shiver the glass roof and the company assembled below, including her majesty, would be cut into mincemeat. Dire were the predictions of the scaremongers when the design for the palace was made public. The first gale, they said, would inevitably wreck it, while the heat engendered by the sun pouring its rays upon the domed glass roof would be so terrific that no human beings could withstand it. Consequently if they escaped an avalanche of glass they would be roasted to death inside the case.

TROPICO

A pleasant evening was passed Monday night by the K. of P. of this city in their hall when the lodge put on the first and second rank.

Clyde Carmak has announced himself as a candidate for school trustee, to take the place of Mr. Richardson, who finds it impossible to continue in that capacity.

The Civic League of Ladies of this city met Thursday afternoon at the Tropico grammar school house. Mr. Rice-Wray spoke on "Ten Years of American Politics."

A prettily appointed luncheon was given by Mrs. Burt Richardson at her home on Eulalia street Wednesday noon. A number of society ladies from this city and Glendale were present.

F. H. Davis is putting in a lot of new shelving in his store on San Fernando road. The new postoffice will be installed in this room and ready for operation next Monday morning.

Improvement work is being done at the corner of San Fernando road and Central avenue. The street is being torn up and a foundation of rock will at once be put in, the grade of the corner being lowered.

Vulcanizing work done at M. & M Furniture Co., 314 Brand Boulevard.

An excellent musical program was given under the auspices of the Baraca class of the Presbyterian Sunday school last Friday evening in the church. It was probably the highest concert ever given here.

Charles Fishel, who several weeks ago sold his nine lots on West Park avenue to the city of Los Angeles for school purposes, has gone to his former home in Nogales, Ariz., where he has purchased property.

Dr. J. L. Miller gave short talks before the various classes of the Tropico grammar school Wednesday afternoon, the subject of his talks being "Character Building." After school hours Dr. Miller lectured before the teachers of the school, in addition to others.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Campbell of Oakland, and Misses Hilda and Elsa Rigg of Los Angeles, and Mr. David Brown of Watts, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marple of East Cypress avenue. At 6 o'clock the hostess served a three-course dinner, after which a pleasant evening was passed.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Cook of Brand boulevard, are entertaining Mrs. D. L. Oliver and son, Reginald. Mrs. Oliver will remain with her daughter, Mrs. Cook, for the remainder of this year. Reginald Oliver, however, will return shortly to his home in Rutherford, N. J., to complete his studies.

For torpid liver, sleeplessness, muddy or sallow complexion, weariness and poor appetite, try Rexall Liver Salts. Only at Nesom's Drug Store.

Work on Glendale avenue is progressing nicely. At this time the attention of the grading gang is being centered on the southern end of the street, where the work will be completed first. Sidewalk and curb has been laid for considerable distances along this street already.

TRY THAT CORN BEEF
At the Glendale Market. It's fine.

TROPICO POSTOFFICE.

Los Angeles will take over the Tropico postoffice next Monday morning, the transfer not having been prepared as an April fool joke. But this office will not lose its name of Tropico, as was previously thought it would, but will be known as "Tropico," just the same as Glendale has its office in its name. Hereafter those residents of Tropico who have been getting their mail through the Glendale office must have their mail addressed to the Tropico office. The new postmaster is desirous that this change of address be corrected as soon as possible. It must also be understood that delivery of mail will be impossible unless residents secure the numbers for their home designated in a recent ordinance by the city council, and have the mail addressed to those numbers.

There will be no change in the mail order department, and registered matter will be received, as has been the rule heretofore. There will be one carrier at present and two deliveries daily. Seven mails a day will come into and go out of Tropico, four being over the Southern Pacific, while three will be over the Pacific Electric. Office hours will be from 8 in the morning until 6 at night.

The system of call boxes will be done away with. There will be a general delivery service for the present, but later only a lock box service will be furnished. The carrier will take the place of the "call box" service. Mail addressed to Los Angeles R. R. No. 5 will be deposited at this office and delivered by the railroad carrier, rather than being deposited at the Los Angeles office. H. G. Van Meter will carry the mails to and from the different stations.

For Dandruff try Rexall 93. Kills the germs and gives new life to the hair. Only at Nesom's Drug Store.

WEST GLENDALE P. T. A.

The Parent-Teacher Association of West Glendale school held a very interesting meeting on Thursday afternoon, March 21st. There was a large attendance despite the inclemency of the weather, and a good program rendered. Music by the fifth grade, directed by Miss Foster, two charming vocal selections by Mrs. Hillyer, one of our local singers of note. Mrs. D. K. Trask of Los Angeles was the speaker of the day, her subject being, "Some Facts and Fancies for Mothers," which proved very interesting.

Mrs. Dr. Jessie Russell, president of the Federation in Glendale, was present, and gave a short but interesting speech. Before the close of the meeting Mrs. Daniel Campbell occupied the floor for a few moments, and made a very earnest appeal to all mothers present, and in fact, to every one interested in the welfare of the boys and young men of Glendale, to do all in their power to defeat the pool room "that is trying to find room in our city." Mrs. Campbell was heartily cheered, and of course this little but most important speech, called for more from others in the room, which made it unusually interesting. Mrs. Witham, the only lady candidate for school trustee, was present and made a few very interesting remarks on the question of the day, and thanks each and every one for their support so far. If there should be a lady trustee, and there is no reason why there should not, Mrs. Witham deserves the most hearty support in the coming election.

At the close of the afternoon, refreshments were served and an unusually pleasant social hour enjoyed. Mrs. Padelford, secretary of the P.T.A., was the center of attraction for all members of the circle, she having just returned from an extended eastern visit, and had many interesting tales to relate, but so glad to be at home once more.

HIGH SCHOOL

Major Kealakai and his Royal Hawaiian Kawallau Orhcestra and Glee Club gave a concert Tuesday afternoon, March 26, at 3 o'clock, in the High School auditorium, for the benefit of the base ball team, who are sadly in need of new base ball suits. The concert was well attended and appreciated by everyone. They closed with the popular Hawaiian song, "Aloha Ae," which received long applause.

Glendale had a tennis tournament with Manual Arts on the home court Saturday, and were defeated by the score of 18 to 3. The Glendale boys played good tennis, but had a little bad luck. The tennis team was composed of Tom Richards, Edwin Sadler, Frank Littell and Wendell Gilhousen.

The English classes are writing school songs, the best one to be set to music and used as our school song. We hope you may all hear it soon.

Prof. T. H. Reed, associate professor of government of the University of California, was a visitor at the High School Monday. He spent the day with the teachers in their class room work, and gave a short talk to the students at the assembly at 3 o'clock, in which he spoke very highly of the school in all its departments.

Last Saturday the Glendale boys went to Long Beach to play the second league game of the series. The Glendale boys usually come home with smiling faces, but this time it was different, for they suffered defeat by Long Beach, the score being 11 to 4.

The American history class has been enjoying a series of talks by Mr. White in which he has discussed the Civil War from the standpoint of the Southern people. He read a very interesting account of the raid on Harper's Ferry made by John Brown. Mr. White's father was present at the time of the raid, and witnessed all that took place. He wrote out his version of the affair. This paper Mr. White read before the class. Also he exhibited the mail sack carried by John Brown, which was taken at the time of his capture. This sack came into the possession of Mr. White's father, and was carried by him as a knapsack through the Civil War. The "coat of gray," a ctptain's uniform, was also one of the relics which Mr. White's father left with him. Letters written at the time pf the war, and other documents, with the stories told by his father and mother, made the discussions full of lively interest.

BUILDING NOTES.

Parker & Sternberg have started work on their new $25,000 block on Brand boulevard, between Fourth and Fifth streets. This building is to be a two-story brick structure with ornate facings of tile, pressed brick, and a marble base. The tile will be tinted green, and that color will be noticeable in the front effect. The upper floor will be divided into apartments, there being about sixty rooms in all. The owners are asking for suggestions for the name of the block.

The following are among the permits issued during the past week: Lottie Moorhouse, Sixth, near Everett, dwelling, $200; Myrtle W. Beal, Sixth, near Jackson, dwelling, $1,50; Chandler & Lowison, four permits for $2,500 each, at 121, 125, 129 and 133 Jackson stree; H. A. Wilson, 327 Louise street, flats, $3,500.

Anthony Ambrosini has sold to the GLENDALE NEWS Company lot 1, block 23, southwest corner Fourth and Jackson; price $4,100.

"REBECCA'S TRIUMPH."

The efforts of the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon Club to add to the amount of money in their building fund proved a success the past week, when, under the direction of Cora Belle Howes, a company composed of local talent presented the play called "Rebecca's Triumph." Filger's Hall was well filled both Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and the audiences were apparently well pleased. The play itself will not stand criticism; it is sufficient to say that the ladies who represented the different parts played them well, making the most of the stilted characetrs. Mrs. Elmer Evens gave a charming representation of Rebecca. Mrs. Ralph Meeker had one of the most lifelike characters in the play, and gave an excellent representation of the old nurse. Miss Shropshire made the most of the character of the impossible spinster, adding much to the hilarity of the occasion. As "Gyp," a little colored girl, Miss Emma Pulliam was a great success, "bringing down the house" more than once with her lively speech and antics. Mrs. Warren Roberts, as Meg, had a difficult part to perform, but did it well. As the Irish maid, Miss Alice Frank had the accent down fine, looked and acted the part well. Mrs. Blanche Martin, as the stately Mrs. Rokeman, the wealthy recluse, gave a good representation of the charter. The cooking class, composed of a large number of young ladies, was one of the most attractive features of the performance, forming pleasant pictures grouped upon the stage, and showing themselves just as they are, a bunch of real wholesome girls.

The readings given by Mrs. Howes were of a high class. Her rendering of the "Reading Class in a Country School" on Wednesday evening was a real treat.

MASS MEETING.

The women of Glendale who are most interested in educational and municipal welfare are greatly interested in the elections of April 5 and 8, and as a means of becoming better acquainted with the citizens from all parts of the city, a large mass meeting has been called for Friday afternoon at 2:30, at the K. of P. Hall, 203½ Brand boulevard. A musical program will be rendered by a prominent Los Angeles orchestra. Mrs. Cora Deal Lewis, a well-known speaker and clubwoman of Los Angeles, will give a short address on "The Civic Responsibility of Women." Punch will be served after the program. The meeting is also being held in the inetrests of the candidates endorsed by the Citizens' League, as the ticket is supported either wholly or in part by the women working on the various committees, and the candidates will be present, although there will be no campaign speeches. Among the women who are serving on the various committees are the following: Mesdames Mary Howard Gridley, M. D. Chemberlin, Wilmot Parcher, Harriet M. White, Laura C. Dack, James H. Culver, H. F. Howard, Alexander Lord, S. C. Leppleman, Grace M. Roach, Stella May Orth, Mary McLean, Adelaide R. Usilton, Clement L. C. Moore, C. F. Parker, Plummer Van Sant, Annie R. Yard, Ethel Fay Whaley, Rebecca McDonald, Ella C. Witham, Hattie E. Gaylord, M. A. Begg, Edward L. Payne, Dr. Jessie A. Russell, Flora M. Pixley, D. L. Gregg, W. J. Lacy, P. H. Sadler, Chas. N. Williams, Geo. E. Adams, W. R. Petty, R. P. McMullen, Frank D. Booth, Nanno Woods, C. E. Hutchison, W. E. Heald, Delegarda, Garrett, Miss Cecelia Harris.

The meeting is open to the general public, and a large attendance is anticipated.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

The NEWS will put out one more issue before the election for the city officers on April 8, but to keep the matter properly in mind we publish herewith a compite list of candidates, as follows:

Trustees, all four-year terms:

W. A. Anderson, 407 South Isabel street.

A. F. Howard, 1530 Hawthorne street.

O. A. Lane, 1017 Chestnut street.

J. W. Lawson, 1327 West Seventh street.

F. J. Showalter, 328 Maryland avenue.

A. W. Tower, 885 Damasco Court.

T. W. Watson, Fourth and Glendale avenue.

R. H. Wells, 1504 West Fourth street.

From this list it should be possible for the voters to make a selection of three good men to fill the vacancies that will exist upon expiration of the terms of Messrs. Lane, Watson and Williams. As stated on more than one occasion, the NEWS favors emphatically the re-election of Messrs. Lane and Watson on account of their records. We further believe that a representative should be taken from that portion of the city west of Brand boulevard, and when that section agrees fairly well upon any individual as such representative, he may well be supported by the rest of the voters.

For city Clerk:

G. B. Woodberry.

H. L. Whaley.

For treasurer:

G. B. Hoffman.

For the same reasons that make us favor Messrs. Lane and Watson, we believe that Messrs. Woodberry and Hoffman should receive support.

Next Monday night the story of David Copperfield, in four reels, will be presented, to be followed by other features of unusual interest.

CIVIC LEAGUE MEETING.

Next Tuesday evening the Civic League will have a meeting at K. of P. Hall, on Brand boulevard, which will be addressed by several of the candidates for municipal and school office, and a generally interesting program will be furnished. Everybody invited.
